Selecting your interest rate basis

We offer loans with a fixed or variable interest rates. The variable rate allows you to pay an interest cost linked to the Bank of England base rate*, while a fixed interest rate gives you certainty of the interest rate you'll pay.

Your requirements

It's difficult to predict future interest rates, so there's no way to know if a fixed or variable interest rate will cost you more or less over the life of your loan. You'll need to consider a number of factors, including how large a payment you can afford, the length of the borrowing term you need and the level of certainty over costs that you need.

You also need to consider any possibility of early repayment, like selling a property.

Capital repayment holidays

The ability to have an interest only period (known as a capital repayment holiday) at the start of your loan (subject to approval). During this time, you'll only pay interest on the outstanding loan.

When it ends, your repayments will increase to make sure the loan is repaid in line with your agreement. You'll also pay more interest over the life of the loan. You can also apply for a capital repayment holiday of up to 12 months during the loan term (subject to approval).

* If this rate becomes less than zero, the variable rate will be deemed to be zero, i.e. the total interest rate will never be less than the facility margin. If you have any questions or concerns about this, please speak to an independent financial advisor.

The table below summarises the differences between your interest rate choices:

	Offers certainty against a rise in interest rates	Lower repayments if interest rates fall	Breakage cost applicable	Prepayment fees
Variable rate	No	Yes	No	No
Fixed rate loans	Yes	No	Yes	No

The contractual term and repayment profile

We offer flexible contractual terms (how long we agree to lend for) and repayment profiles (how long you'll make specified payments for, to fully repay the loan). Where these are the same, the loan will be fully repaid by the maturity date. Where the repayment profile is longer than the contractual term, there'll be an outstanding balance at the maturity date (which might be significant).

The contractual terms can affect the interest you pay and can be shorter than the repayment profile.

Things to consider when choosing a loan with a longer repayment profile than contractual term

Loans over £100,000 with a longer contractual term may be priced higher than loans with shorter contractual terms to reflect the increased costs associated with lending money for longer.

You might want a loan where the contractual term is shorter than the repayment profile if you think the associated interest rate will benefit your circumstances.

If you choose a loan with a contractual term shorter than the repayment profile, there'll be an outstanding balance at the end of the contractual term. If the term is considerably shorter than the repayment profile, the lump sum payable is likely to be substantial.

At the end of your contractual term, you might want to take out another loan with us to pay the outstanding balance. If you do this:

- You'll need to submit a new application and we can't guarantee we'll accept it
- The interest rate offered will reflect the rates and your circumstances at the time. The new interest rate could be higher or lower than the rate on your expiring loan and the lending margin could also change
- If we accept your application, we'll charge a new arrangement fee for this loan.

Important information

- Any fixed interest rate we quote is indicative until we confirm it in your facility letter. You'll have 30 days to sign, return and draw down the full amount of the loan for any fixed rate in the facility letter to be valid
- We don't provide advice or recommendations on the suitability of your chosen finance solution. If you need advice, please consult an independent adviser
- Paying off your loans with multiple shorter-term loans can cost more or less over your total borrowing period.

If you repay your loan early

You can pay up to 10% of the outstanding balance, (calculated on each anniversary of the first drawdown date) without having to pay any breakage costs. There are no breakage costs on variable rate loans.

However, if you choose a fixed-rate loan and repay it early for any reason, you may have to pay breakage costs as well as other fees.

The breakage cost is a percentage of the payment linked to the number of full years left on the fixed rate.

The below table is an example of the percentages for a loan with a 10-year fixed-rate period.

Year of the loan you're in when you make your payment (or required repayment)	1st	2nd	3rd	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th	10th
% payable of the amount of the prepayment (or required repayment)	7%	7%	7%	6%	5%	4%	3%	2%	1%	1%

As an example, if you make a £100,000 prepayment three years and six months from the start of your loan, you're in your fourth year and you'll need to pay £6,000 in breakage costs (6%). This example assumes you've already used the 10% annual overpayment allowance.

The percentage amount you'll have to pay will differ, depending on the fixed-rate period you chose.
